Description of the Fish 'n Fins ECO - RANGER - PALAU Program

After meeting at Fish 'n Fins our young ECO - RANGER - PALAU apprentices will leave from our pier for a short trip to Dolphin Bay, an eco research center.

Dolphin Bay takes its name from the dolphins, which have been living there for the past 20 years - dolphins rescued from Japanese Taiji and brought to Palau to live free - to the surprise of the Japanese biologist team the dolphins came back after being set free - biologists have even taken the dolphins for long trips and were surprised that the animals would follow the boat out in the sea and back home. The head biologist suggested that the dolphins may enjoy safety and easy meals over exploring the ocean by themselves.

A sign of their content is that they have made babies - ECO - RANGERS will see adult dolphins and their babies and be able to feed and of course be in photos with them.
